How the Hormuz crisis exposes structural vulnerabilities in India's energy sector

The Strait of Hormuz is the central artery of the global energy system. Approximately 20–21 million barrels per day of crude oil used to pass through this narrow passage, accounting for nearly one-fifth of global petroleum consumption. In addition, close to 25-30 per cent of global Liquefied Natural Gas (LNG) trade transits the same route. For emerging economies like India, the implications of a closure at the Strait of Hormuz are immediate and severe. India imports nearly 85 per cent of its crude oil requirements, with roughly 40 per cent of imports coming from the Middle East. This creates a structural dependency on a single chokepoint. Unlike diversified energy systems, India's supply chain has limited redundancy. As per the International Energy Agency's (IEA) 'Oil Market Report' published on 12th March 2026, global oil supply is already estimated to have fallen by at least 8 million barrels per day in March alone due to production shut-ins across the Gulf. This is the largest supply disruption in modern oil market history. A sustained disruption to the supply of crude oil can lead to significant appreciation of crude oil prices. At $130 oil and beyond, the macroeconomic impact for India becomes systemic. The first channel of transmission is inflation. Energy costs feed directly into transportation, logistics, and manufacturing. In India, where supply chains remain cost-sensitive, higher fuel prices quickly translate into higher food and core inflation. This would push CPI well above the Reserve Bank of India's target range, forcing a pause or reversal in any easing cycle. The second channel is fiscal. The Indian government has historically used fuel taxes as a shock absorber. During periods of rising crude prices, excise duties are often reduced to contain inflation. This comes at a fiscal cost. A prolonged oil shock would therefore compress government revenues at the same time that expenditure pressures rise. The third channel is growth. Higher energy prices act as a tax on consumption. Household spending weakens, corporate margins come under pressure, and capital expenditure decisions are delayed. Emerging markets are particularly vulnerable to such shocks because they lack the financial buffers available to developed economies.

What transforms this from a cyclical challenge into a structural risk is duration. Short disruptions can be managed. Global strategic petroleum reserves can be released. The International Energy Agency can coordinate supply responses. Demand can adjust at the margin.

However, the data shows that these mechanisms are insufficient for prolonged disruptions. IEA countries collectively hold over 1 billion barrels of emergency reserves, but coordinated releases can supply only 2–4 million barrels per day on a temporary basis. This is meaningful for short-term shocks but inadequate if a significant portion of the 20 million barrels per day flowing through Hormuz is disrupted for weeks or months.

The Little Stars of Advertising - How Kids Shine on Screen

Dr. Vinod Chandrashekhar Dixit
Free-lance Journalist, Writer & Cartoonist
(dixitpatrakar@yahoo.in)

It is observed that now-a-days children are breaking new grounds in advertising. After selling milk drinks and detergents to mostly mothers for years, the young ones are now trying to influence big investments of decision makers at home and in business. Children are making the adults buy. So grabbing adult attention through kids is a sound strategy. It is clear, featuring children helps companies get rid of boring and cliché methods, especially when the product carries a serious image.

According to a senior psychiatrist "Commodification of child psyche is an unhealthy pattern. Many a times they don't even have insight about the product they are promoting. It's a kind of child labour,".

Children appearing in the advertisements, posters or photos can attract more customers and help the buyers know more about the product. However, if the children commercials involve sexual contents, the commercial should be banned and the situation should be stopped. Children are innocent and pure, the society should not use their innocent to earn money immorally. Children are innocent and not so mature. When a marketer advertises a product on television, they do not understand that it is a business and their main aim is to sell. They do not understand that advertisers try to push their products and market in such a way that children want to buy it.

Children participation in advertisements become popular and they face many comments and criticism. However, children are not mature enough, when facing criticism, they find difficult to accept and may cause psychological shadow. This is because children are not mature enough to think what they want or is the thing benefit to themselves, they are just simply accept everything that their parents arrange for them. Children should have a normal childhood which is playing with friends and families . Taking part in TV commercials is exhausting for children. They should spend so much time on the jobs if they become the celebrities . Children do not have enough strength to take part in the TV commercials and it will affect their physical health. Also,their time will be spent on the jobs and they will not have time to stay with their families or make friends . They cannot have a normal childhood like other children if they become celebrities . They may not have friends and feel lonely . Children are too young to face this entertainment industry, being a celebrity will always receive lots of attacks without any reasons.

Also, children are too young and they don't know how to protect themselves even though their parents are staying with them. Childhood is a time that full of joyful and being a celebrity will make them received many negative comments without any reasons.

It is bad for their mentally development. Besides, involving in the commercials have to spend a lot of time.

Woman alleges assault at Adalaj society, 5 booked

A 23-year-old woman has alleged that she was assaulted and an attempt was made to sexually assault her by a group of individuals in a residential society in Adalaj on the outskirts of Ahmedabad. Adalaj police have registered an FIR against five persons and initiated an investigation. According to police, the incident took place around 9.30 pm on April 1 at a society in Lilapur. Rekha (name changed) stated that she was walking within the society premises while speaking on the phone when the main accused, identified as Hiranbhai Savjibhai Chaudhary, approached her and began abusing her. Chaudhary allegedly carrying an iron pipe assaulted the woman, grabbed her by the face and neck, and attempted to drag her with the intent to assault her sexually. During the scuffle, her T-shirt was torn, and she sustained injuries after being struck with the pipe and fists. Hearing her screams, neighbours identified as Tulsibhai, Jashubhai and a woman named Shobhanaben allegedly joined in and assaulted the complainant. Another individual later slapped her, the complaint states. When the victim's mother and brother rushed to the spot, the accused allegedly attacked them as well. The complainant's brother was reportedly beaten with an iron pipe, causing injuries to his hands. The accused also allegedly damaged the complainant's mobile phone and spectacles and caused a gold chain belonging to a family member to go missing during the altercation.
