Siddharth Randeria Leads Jindagi Once More, Streaming Only on ShemarooMe

Ahmedabad, ShemarooMe is set to premiere the heartfelt film Jindagi Once More. At its heart, the film is a story about second chances, the chance to revisit the past, reconnect with the people who matter, say what was left unsaid, and make time for the moments we once let pass us by. It is also the story of a father, the man who is expected to always be strong, often keeps his feelings to himself and quietly puts his family first. Jindagi Once More brings this rarely explored side of fatherhood to life, uncovering the emotions, sacrifices, and unspoken feelings that so often hide behind a father's quiet strength. This story is about looking beyond the roles and relationships we grow accustomed to and discovering the people behind them. As the son begins to uncover chapters from his father's life, the film explores how every family carries stories, friendships and experiences that can remain hidden across generations. The narrative brings together emotion, warmth and the idea that sometimes, the heroes we search for outside are already present within our own homes. Marking Dharma Productions' first venture into Gujarati cinema, Jindagi Once More is a heartfelt family drama.

Ahmedabad Physician Decodes the Nerve Pain Behind Gujarat's Diabetes Rise

Ahmedabad, In Ahmedabad, the first response to pain is rarely a doctor. It is the neighbourhood chemist. RusanMed's nationwide Independent Survey on Pain Management in India, which polled 746 doctors in 2025, found that when patients self-medicate for pain, doctors report over-the-counter oral analgesics as by far the most common choice, cited in 69.6% of cases, a pattern consistent with national research showing that 64.4% of Indians self-medicate among the most commonly self-medicated drugs. This Pain Awareness Month, the city's physicians warn that this self-medication culture is masking a more serious problem: nerve pain driven by Gujarat's rising urban diabetes burden. Dr. Rashmin Sanghavi (Anaesthesiology & Pain Management), Senior consultant Anaesthesiologist and Pain Physician Sterling Hospital,Ahmedabad, Gujarat, says, "Ordinary painkillers may provide temporary relief from nerve pain, but they generally do not address the underlying nerve damage. Moreover, repeated or unsupervised use can increase the risk of adverse effects involving the stomach, kidneys, and cardiovascular system. When a patient tells me the tingling has been there for a year but the tablets 'manage' it, I know we have lost precious time. Neuropathy, if caught early, can be stabilised. Neuropathy ignored can become irreversible." Ms Malavika Kaura Saxena, Chief Marketing Officer, Rusan Healthcare Pvt. Ltd., adds, "We often hear from physicians that patients arrive having already tried to manage the pain themselves for months. (19-10)

Dr Banarji B.H. Receives Indian Patent for Novel Rotator Cuff Repair Apparatus

Ahmedabad, Turning a challenging surgical experience into an indigenous medical innovation, Dr Banarji B.H., Additional Director - Orthopaedics at Sakra World Hospital, Bengaluru, has been granted an Indian Patent by the Patent Office, Government of India, for his invention titled "Apparatus for Trans-Osseous Rotator Cuff Repair." The patented apparatus is designed to enable rotator cuff repair through bone tunnels rather than conventional suture anchors. The approach may be particularly useful in patients with poor bone quality, including elderly patients and those with osteoporosis, where conventional anchors may not achieve adequate fixation.The idea for the invention emerged during a challenging rotator cuff repair in a patient with poor bone quality. During the procedure, Dr Banarji found that the bone was not providing adequate purchase for conventional anchor fixation. Rather than compromising the quality of the repair, he explored an alternative approach that involved repairing the tendon through the bone itself. This successful experience prompted him to develop the concept further and design an apparatus that could facilitate trans-osseous rotator cuff repair. The innovation was developed and refined over approximately three to four years, drawing extensively on Dr Banarji's surgical experience and clinical observations. (20-4)

School administrators submit a representation to the Education Secretary on the issue of admission of disabled children

Ahmedabad, The state school administrators' association has written a letter to the education secretary regarding the education of disabled children. Keeping in mind the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act-2016, the administrators say that when a disabled child gets admission in a general school, they are ready to provide accessible facilities including ramps, special toilets, tactile paths as per their needs. However, it has been submitted that school administrators are being pressured to make all such facilities mandatory even in schools where a disabled child does not get admission. Therefore, there has been a demand to reconsider the education system that has been going on for years and make new rules.

Even the disabled are studying for board exams or Ph.D. Under the Education Department, general schools like Kanya Shala, Kumar Shala, Mishra Shala are run. While special schools like Andha Shala, Andha Apang Shala are run. In which parents get their children admitted based on the disability of the children. Those children also study up to Ph.D after giving the board exams of standard 10 and standard 12. Even though a disabled child is not in school, his facilities are necessary , but when a disabled child gets admission in a regular school, the school board has to make a classroom door more than 900 mm wide in the classroom in the school building. Similarly, there has to be a path to reach the blackboard and a place where a wheelchair can turn. Special arrangements for toilets have to be made for a disabled child.
