Nestlé India Delivers Double-Digit, Volume-Led Growth in FY2025-26

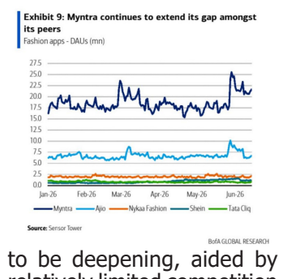

Ahmedabad, Nestlé India Limited reported a strong performance in FY2025-26, delivering double-digit, volume-led growth and gaining market share across categories, as the Company continued to sharpen its consumer-first approach, deepen market penetration and invest behind brands, capacity and technology. Sharing his first annual message to shareholders as Chairman and Managing Director, Mr. Manish Tiwary said Nestlé India recorded total sales of ?23,071.5 crore during the year despite operating in an environment marked by food inflation, affordability pressures, geopolitical uncertainties and evolving consumer preferences. "Consistent performance rarely comes from doing many things at once. It comes from a few sound choices, disciplined execution and a culture of continuous improvement. Over the course of the year, we focused on the fundamentals, delivering double-digit, volume-led growth with strong market share gains," said Mr. Tiwary. Nestlé India anchored its strategy around four priorities-consumer centricity, penetration-led volume growth, reinvestment behind brands and capacity, and accelerating technology-enabled sales and operations. Emphasising that consumer insight must outweigh internal assumptions, Mr. Tiwary said Nestlé India continues to closely monitor changing consumption patterns across markets, cities, towns and villages and convert those insights into action. Flipkart extends lead in Indian e-commerce

Ahmedabad, Flipkart Group has widened its lead in India's e-commerce market and strengthened its dominance in online fashion through Myntra, according to a Bank of America Securities report that points to resilient consumer demand despite intense competition across the internet sector. The brokerage, citing Sensor Tower daily active user (DAU) data and industry checks, said Flipkart remained the leading e-commerce platform by user engagement as of June 2026, while Myntra continued to pull ahead of rivals in fashion. The findings suggest that competitive pressures in India's online retail market have yet to dent Flipkart's market position, even as rivals continue to invest heavily to gain share. BofA said Myntra's leadership in fashion appears to be deepening, aided by relatively limited competition in premium fashion and beauty categories.

The brokerage noted that several competitors had sought to position themselves as credible challengers, but user engagement trends indicate Myntra continues to consolidate its advantage. The report comes amid signs of improving consumer sentiment following a decline in global commodity prices after the US-Iran peace agreement. (19-10)

Europe is losing its soul, must return to its roots

Let's be clear. Italy leaving Europe is not on the table. We are Europe — more than two thousand years ago, everything was born right here. It should come as no surprise that we were among the founders of the European Community. Without Italy, there would be no European Union. Europe is the cradle of the West. And what is the West? Let's simplify it as much as we can: the West is everything that Ancient Greece protected by establishing a frontier — a space within which, era after era, the foundational principles of who we are were shaped and then consolidated — and not without difficulty. Principles like freedom and equality of human beings. But also principles like the inseparable bond between faith and reason — a legacy of Christianity — that sets us apart from other cultures and religions. Pope Benedict XVI expressed this perfectly in his famous Regensburg address, which was, unsurprisingly, opposed by those who deny the centrality of Western culture. We Westerners tend to see our values-freedom, equality, democracy, individual rights, and the meeting point between reason and transcendence — as universal. But if we look around us, we have to admit that these are not universal values. They are characteristic of the culture of a specific part of the world. It is our identity as Europeans and Westerners, as heirs to classical and Judeo-Christian culture. This is what the Conservatives have always sought to defend. Our critique of the European Union stems from the belief that Europe should not be reduced to an aseptic, supranational organisation — sort of exclusive club that one can only join with the right credentials and be thrown out of if other members disapprove. But Europe is far more than rules and labels. It's a shared history among peoples. It's the desire to build a common future. My criticism of the European Union arises from the desire to defend these cornerstones — in a word, identity — from an approach that can sometimes be too invasive and self-referential. In other words, I don't want to distance myself from Europe. On the contrary, I don't want Europe to distance itself from its own roots. That's why I fight those in Europe who deny who we are and work hard to weaken our identity. I am pro-European, much more than many of those self-proclaimed pro-Europeans. The real choice is not between being pro-sovereignty and being pro-European, as some like to suggest, only to fuel division. It's between a federation and a confederation. Let me explain… We need to be very clear on this — because even on these issues, there's a war of words that risks playing into the hands of the Left.
